FUNNGRO

Website SEO Audit Report

Public-facing website review • Prepared 11 November 2026

Audit scope
Desk-based review of publicly indexed content and search presentation for the homepage, teen experience and company/brand experience. This is not a full technical crawl or a Lighthouse/PageSpeed test.

Pages reviewed

Homepage: https://www.funngro.com/
Teen experience: https://www.funngro.com/teen
Company / brand experience: https://www.funngro.com/for-brands
Supporting pages referenced: /about, /faq, /blog, /trust and /contact

Executive summary

Funngro has a clear search proposition around young people earning through real brand campaigns, with a separate B2B proposition for brands seeking youth participation. Search-indexed content exposes useful product detail, campaign categories, trust information and supporting editorial content. The main opportunities are to tighten keyword targeting by audience, reduce repetitive search phrases, strengthen evidence and context around numerical claims, and validate technical SEO and performance with a live crawl.

Overall assessment: Good content foundation; technical status not fully verified. A numerical SEO score is intentionally omitted because key technical checks were not directly measurable in this audit.

1. What is working well

Clear audience split

Distinct journeys serve young earners and companies. The company page covers promotion, sampling, referrals, influencer marketing, UGC, surveys, app testing, ideation and related campaign formats.

Search-relevant subject coverage

The homepage and teen content describe brand campaigns, content creation, referrals, surveys, sampling and payouts. The brand page addresses youth marketing and campaign participation.

Trust and conversion support

Supporting pages cover company background, FAQs, trust and safety, and contact paths. These help visitors evaluate credibility before acting.

Editorial opportunity

The blog includes guides around youth earning and brand promotion. Useful original articles can attract long-tail searches and internally link to relevant product pages.

2. Priority findings and recommendations

Priority	Finding	Recommended action
High	Teen-page copy appears to repeat broad earning-related phrases in several sections.	Edit for natural language. Keep one primary topic per section; use related terms only when useful to visitors.

Priority	Finding	Recommended action
High	Brand-page proof points include large audience and campaign-performance figures.	Show methodology, timeframe, cohort and source context near each metric. Do not imply representative results are guaranteed.
High	Teen and brand pages have different search intents.	Keep teen targeting focused on suitable youth opportunities; keep B2B targeting focused on youth marketing, UGC, sampling, surveys and campaign activation.
Medium	Metadata and heading hierarchy were not independently inspected in rendered source.	Verify unique title tags, concise meta descriptions, one descriptive H1, logical H2/H3 hierarchy and descriptive link text.
Medium	The site has multiple useful supporting pages.	Add contextual internal links between homepage, /teen, /for-brands, /trust, /faq, /blog and /contact.
Medium	Image accessibility and image-search signals cannot be confirmed from indexed text alone.	Check informative images for meaningful alt text; use empty alt for decorative images. Compress assets and set explicit dimensions.
Medium	Structured data and crawl directives were not verified.	Check canonical URLs, robots.txt, XML sitemap, indexability and valid Organization/WebSite/BreadcrumbList schema where appropriate.
Medium	Mobile usability and Core Web Vitals were not measured.	Run PageSpeed Insights and Lighthouse on mobile and desktop; use measured LCP, INP and CLS to prioritize fixes.

3. Page-by-page keyword direction

/	Platform overview	Funngro; youth brand campaigns; young India and brands; opportunities for young people
/teen	Youth opportunity discovery	Funngro for teens; brand campaigns for teens; youth opportunities; content, surveys, sampling and referrals
/for-brands	Business campaign planning	Youth marketing campaigns; reach young India; UGC campaigns; product sampling; youth surveys; app testing

4. Suggested title and meta-description drafts

Teen title: Funngro for Teens | Explore Brand Campaigns & Opportunities

5. Technical checks required before a complete audit

• Crawl the live site and record HTTP status, redirects, canonical tags, index/noindex directives and broken internal links.

• Validate XML sitemap coverage and robots.txt rules; submit only canonical, indexable URLs.

• Run PageSpeed Insights or Lighthouse on mobile and desktop for the three primary pages; record actual LCP, INP and CLS.

• Inspect rendered HTML for titles, descriptions, H1 count, heading order, alt text, Open Graph tags and structured data.

• Check Search Console for queries, impressions, clicks, indexing exclusions, Core Web Vitals and manual actions.

• Test forms, CTA destinations, mobile navigation, keyboard focus and basic accessibility.

6. Conclusion

Funngro's public content communicates two clear audiences and a broad set of brand-campaign use cases. The strongest next step is not to add more keywords; it is to improve precision, substantiate metrics, connect related pages and verify technical performance with measured tools. This is a preliminary desk audit, not a full technical crawl or proof of ranking improvements.

Sources and limitations

Sources reviewed: Funngro homepage, Teen page, For Brands page, About, FAQ, Blog, Trust and Contact pages. Public search-indexed content was available. Direct source-level inspection returned no readable HTML lines in the browser view, so canonical tags, robots directives, schema markup, image alt attributes, Core Web Vitals, page speed, mobile rendering and broken-link counts are marked unverified rather than assumed.
